

By surveying community water sources, meeting with community leaders and employing human rights and public health methodologies to assess the right to water in Haiti this cutting-edge right to water project resulted in a report which analyzes the devastating consequences of the failure of the Inter-American Development Bank to disburse approximately $54 million in life-saving loans for water and sanitation improvements. The implementing organizations seek to contribute to a change in policy so that international financial institutions, national governments and other entities respect the full range of human rights for people impacted by development projects.

Join us for presentations and discussions with the study's investigators and authors including:

- Prof. Margaret Satterthwaite, NYU Center for Human Rights and Global Justice;
- Amanda Klasing, NYU Center for Human Rights and Global Justice and RFK Memorial Center for Human Rights;
- Dr. Evan Lyon, Partners In Health;
- Monika Kalra Varma, RFK Memorial Center for Human Rights;
- Jude Jean and Loune Viaud, Zanmi Lasante.

WÒCH NAN SOLEY:

A STUDY OF THE RIGHT TO WATER IN HAITI

June 23, 2008 6:30-8pm

RSVP rsvp@rfkmemorial.org

NYU School of Law - Vanderbilt Hall
40 Washington Square South, Room 204
New York, NY 10012